Damaging Evidence Against Walling Not Ruled Out.

Thus the Claim of Conspiracy to Murder Pearl Is Given Foundation.

Watchman Kinney Testifies That He Saw Walling and Pearl Together in the Depot—Kinney Said: "I Can Never Forget That Man or That Girl."

NEWPORT, Ky., June 5.—Judge Helm ruled that all of Walling's damaging admissions, as related by Reporter Anthony Thursday, should be admitted. This decision was a blow to the defense, for a part of the testimony admitted was Walling's confession that he knew Pearl Bryan had been murdered.

Elizabeth Ware, who lives at the first toll-gate out of Newport on the Licking Pike, testified Friday that a carriage passed through the tollgate without stopping on the night of January 31. It was drawn by one horse. She called out three times to the driver to stop and pay toll, but he paid no attention. It was after 12 o'clock.

Watchman Pat Kinney, of the Grand Central station, was then called. He said that on the afternoon of January 31 he saw Alonzo Walling and a young woman answering Pearl Bryan's description. The girl was weeping. She was constantly talking to Walling, who seemed to turn a deaf ear to her entreaties.

Kinney's identification of Walling was intensely dramatic. Turning around in the witness box he pointed out Walling's reddening face and declared: "I can never forget that man nor that girl." Walling eyed the witness and attempted to smile.

Police Surgeon James M. French, of Cincinnati, said that he examined Scott Jackson's coat found in a sewer and discovered evidences of blood stains.

Charles Vickers, claim clerk of the Cincinnati police department, repeated his testimony given in the Jackson case as to the discovery of the bloody valise in Kugel's saloon.

Al Schroeder was an important witness. He swore that he was on the Licking pike on the night of the murder. He also saw the one-horse carriage driven rapidly away from Newport. He could not tell the color of the horse.

PAID THE PENALTY.

Joseph Windrath Dies on the Scaffold for the Murder of Carey B. Birch.

CHICAGO, June 5.—After having been respited within sight of the gallows, in order that the question of his mental condition might be passed upon by a special jury, with the result that he was found to be sane, Joseph Windrath, one of the slayers of Carey B. Birch, receiver of the West Chicago Street Car Co., was hanged at the county jail Friday afternoon. The drop fell at 12.01. Several times during the morning the condemned man gave way to wild paroxysms of rage, and an hour before his hanging made a desperate effort to escape from the room in which he was awaiting the end. He was overpowered, however, by the guards and his arms pinioned. On the scaffold and up to the moment the drop fell he shouted incessantly at the top of his voice: "Matt, open the handbox," a phrase which has been on his tongue ever since his conviction, and the constant repetition of which furnished the grounds for the claim that he was insane. The preliminaries on the scaffold occupied but two minutes. To his attorneys Friday morning Windrath reiterated his denial of any complicity in Birch's murder.

CINCINNATI, June 5.—Herr John Hauk, president of the John Hauk Brewing Co., died at ten o'clock Thursday night, at a private hospital in the Highlands of Newport. CORBIN KILLED.

The New York Multi-Millionaire the Victim of An Accident.

The Coachman Injured Internally and Died Soon After the Runaway.

Corbin Edgell, a Nephew, and Dr. Paul Kanzier Were Badly Injured. The Victims Thrown Over an Eight Foot Embankment, Against a Wall.

NEWPORT, N. H., June 5.—Mr. Austin Corbin and his nephew, Corbin Edgell, with Dr. Paul Kanzier and Coachman John Stokes, started on a fishing trip about three o'clock Thursday afternoon. On going out of the yard at the farm house the horses shied, tipping over the open carriage, throwing the occupants down an embankment about eight feet against a stone wall. The family saw the accident from the piazza and hurried to his assistance with the farm help. They found Mr. Corbin conscious but terribly wounded. His nephew and the doctor were also conscious. The coachman was unconscious and apparently hurt the worst of all. They were carried to the house and doctors summoned. Mr. Corbin's injuries were very serious, a compound fracture of the right leg above the right knee, a fearful scalp wound over four inches long on the forehead, cut through to the skull; one on the right side of the head three inches long and the hip and chin cut badly.

Dr. Kanzier was thrown over the wall and sustained a broken arm and sprained ankle, so far as known, and Corbin Edgell has his leg twice broken between the knee and ankle. John Stokes, right leg broken between the knee and ankle and sustained a fractured skull. Stokes died from his injuries about six o'clock without regaining consciousness.

The cause of the horses shying is said to be from the fact that the coachman was driving them for the first time without blinkers.

Mr. Corbin died at 9:42 Thursday evening, shortly after the arrival of Dr. Cliley from Boston. His son, Austin Corbin, Jr., arrived on a train from Boston about eleven o'clock, but too late to see his father alive. All the other members of the family, with the exception of his son-in-law, Mr. Geo. S. Edgell, who is in the west, were present when he breathed his last.

NEW YORK, June 5.—Austin Corbin was born in Newport, N. H., July 11, 1827. His father was a farmer who was many times elected to the legislature of New Hampshire. After receiving a moderate amount of schooling, he taught a country school. He afterwards studied law with Chief Justice Cushing, of New Hampshire, and Gov. Vetoile, of Rhode Island, and finished the course at the Harvard law school, where he received his degree in 1851. He practiced while at home, but in 1851 removed to Davenport, Iowa, where he remained until 1853. Though successful as a lawyer, Mr. Corbin did not practice long. He became a partner in 1853 of the banking firm of Maclos and Corbin, which was the only concern of the kind in Davenport, which did not suspend payment in the financial panic of 1857. Corbin organized the First national bank, which began business under the national currency act of 1863. The bank was successful and Mr. Corbin was enabled in 1863 to come to New York with a considerable fortune. Here he founded the Corbin Banking Co. and acquired interest after interest until he became one of the leading financiers of the community.

Mr. Corbin had a beautiful home on Long Island, another in New Hampshire, besides his town houses. His New Hampshire property consisted of 25,000 acres around Newport, all mountain and valley. This last property is the greatest and best stocked game preserve on the continent.

FROM AMBUSH.

An Electric Car at Milwaukee Fired Into—Motorman Breen Fatally and Conductor Schwatzer Seriously Injured.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 5.—Late Thursday night a car on the Howell street extension was fired into by unknown parties, and Motorman John E. Breen fatally and Conductor Schwatzer seriously injured. About 30 shots were fired, but who the would-be assassins were is not known, as the shots came from behind a clump of bushes about six blocks from the city limits.

The car was riddled with bullets and had there been any passengers in it, the list of fatalities would have been much larger. Breen was shot in the back, the ball penetrating his kidneys and bladder. The motorman was shot in the right leg above the knee. Both men were taken to the Emergency hospital, where it is said Breen will die before morning.

The police were immediately informed of the outrage and sent a squad to the scene, but no arrests were made. The shooting is undoubtedly the outcome of the strike. Breen came here from Manistee, Mich., a week ago.

Detectives arrested J. H. Garrigan, a striking motorman, and John Walters, a molder, in the vicinity of the scene of the shooting affray at midnight. Both men were armed with revolvers.

About dark he was seen sitting in his buggy on the side of the road and not far from his home, apparently asleep. Tuesday morning his buggy with the articles he purchased while in town Monday was found only a mile from the city, but horse and harness as well as the man had disappeared.

EVASDED THE QUESTION.

When Asked as to Whether He Wrote the Free Silver Letter McKinley Smiled.

CANTON, O., June 5.—The publication by a New York paper of what purports to be a letter indorsing free silver, written by Maj. McKinley to the Stark county Farmers' alliance, does not seem to disturb the governor to any great extent. When a United Press representative called at the McKinley residence Thursday evening the subject of the alleged letter was broached. When it was mentioned the governor looked across the room intently at a picture of Gen. Garfield.

"Oh," said the governor, "about the World matter," and as he spoke he showed a telegram which he had received during the afternoon on the same topic. "Well," said he, "this will cease in a short time."

When questioned as to its authenticity McKinley only smiled, but uttered not a word. Those familiar with McKinley's gesture and smile know it is useless to talk further on any topic.
